

TARGETED CONTENT DELIVERY

This patented technology generally relates to the distribution of content to client systems. The technology can be used to ascertain infrastructure related information about a client system, such as installed hardware or applications, as well as location, in order to send appropriate content to the client system.